SELECTION PROCESS

Judging for the prize will be as follows:

1. Stage 1 – a team of readers will read all submissions and select the shortlist, which will comprise a maximum of 5 titles.
2. Stage 2 – the authors of the shortlisted titles will be contacted on or before 1 May 2012, and will be required to submit the full manuscript. Failure to provide a full manuscript in the time requested will result in the shortlisted title being withdrawn from the selection process.
3. Stage 3 – the full manuscripts for the shortlist will be put to the judging panel, which will assess the entries. The judging panel is: children's author Catherine Johnson, Shannon Park (Editorial Director, Puffin Books) and children's literary agent Catherine Pellegrino.
4. Stage 4 – the panel of judges will convene to discuss the winner of the prize.
5. The decisions of the judging panel are final and binding, and Commonword Children's Diversity Writing Prize or its partners will not enter into correspondence or negotiations regarding the results.
6. Due to the high volume of submissions, the organisers are unable to contact all entrants to inform them of their progress. Only shortlisted entrants will be contacted on or before 1 May. Any entrant not contacted by that date should assume they have been unsuccessful.
